Proofreading

We need proofreaders! Digital processing of books is still a difficult task because errors other than those of the author can be introduced. Proofreading consists in:

- Tracking misspellings, grammar errors, misprints...
- Correcting any error (page interchange, caption misplaced, layout...).
- Comparing with the original to make the copy as identical as possible, except the author's errors and the possible corrections that he published.

NB: It is a long and heavy work. Do it only if you are sure to conclude! It is better to proofread carefully a few pages than to proofread badly the whole book.

You find a mistake (or several...)

- Be sure that it is really an error by comparing with the original (file ..._O.pdf)
- send us by mail (biblio6@cactuspro.com) the description of the mistake and the correction.

NB: Knowledge progress since the work was published may prove that the author was wrong. This is not a “mistake” that deserves correction however.
